When women gather together and share what it is to be a woman today, one significant experience is often unnamed or marginalized – being and living as a woman who will never be a “mother” in the traditional way.

Whether because of a decision your body made, one you forgot to make, one you made freely or one you are struggling with today, being a woman without being a mother evokes its own unique feelings, considerations and experiences that deserve to be named and shared in the company of like women.

Join other childless or childfree women on this Other Path as we tell our stories, explore our challenges, grieve our losses, ask our questions, discover our fertile gifts and birth our creative desires.

There will be time and space for all women without children – those who wanted children, forgot to have them, or never wanted them – those who are grieving, ambivalent or resolved.

Suzan J. Cotellesse, LPC, LMFT, is childfree and has created workshops and groups as containers in which women can break their silence and speak about the circumstances – chance or choice – that led to their being childless or childfree.

“For two decades I wrestled alone with the ambiguity of becoming a mother or remaining childfree. Only after resolving the questions for myself did I consider that thousands of women were also joining the ranks of childless/free women. Whatever the individual circumstances that led us to this childless or childfree juncture on our life’s journey, we have been silent about the trip. I had yearned for a time and place to speak with other women who were not mothers and to explore ways we could fulfill ourselves as women on this Other Path.”
